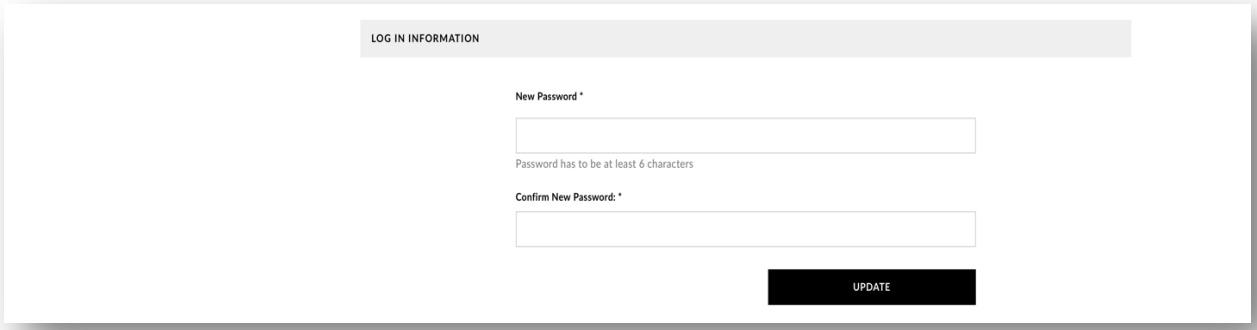
40 min exploratory testing https://boohoo.com

OS: MacOS Monterey 12.4

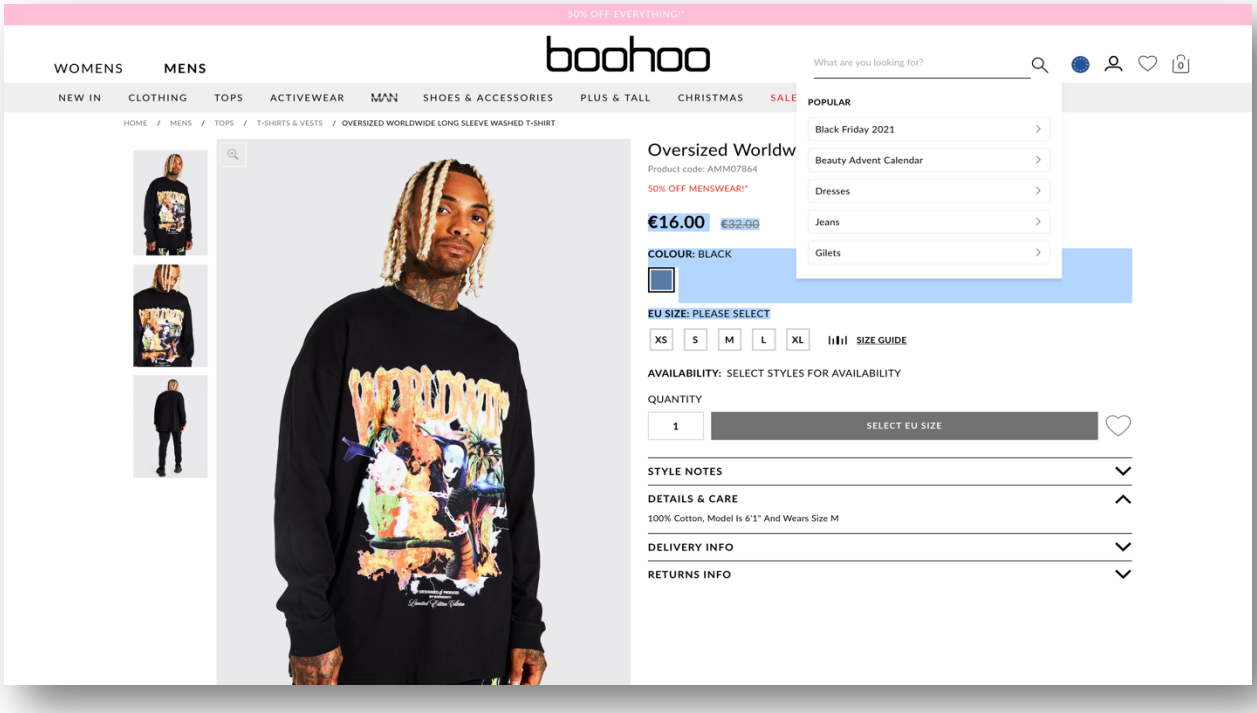
Browser: Safari Version 15.5 (17613.2.7.1.8)

Bugs found: 11

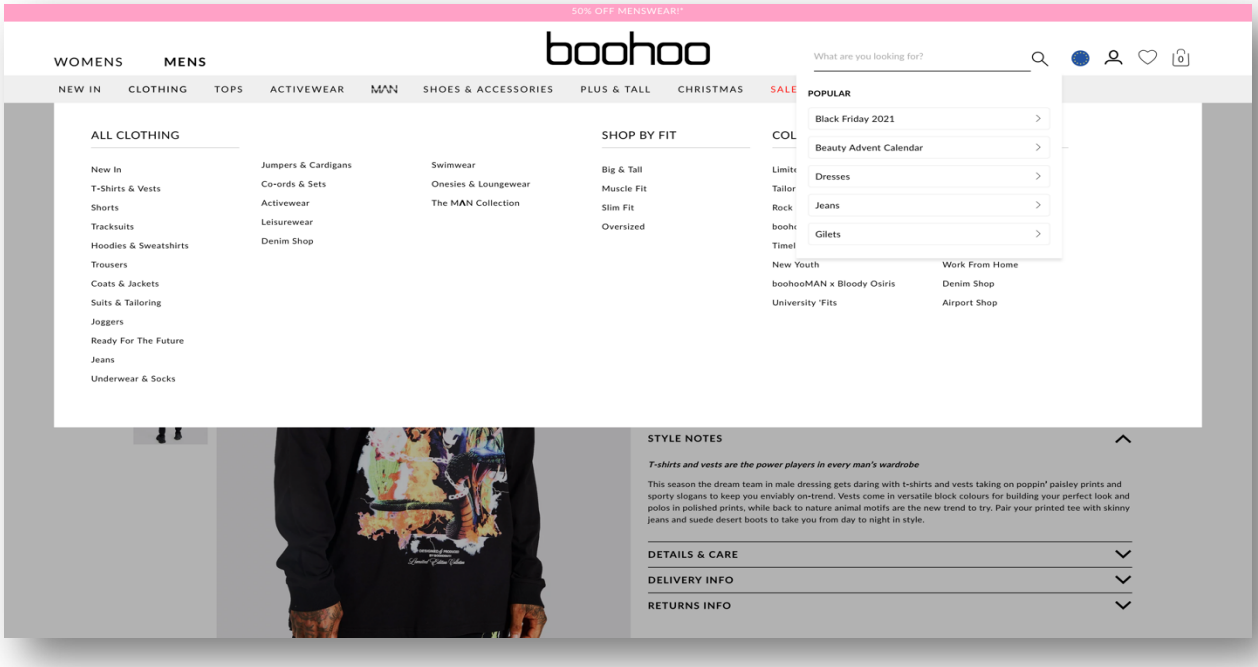
1. The password only offers minimum security, it does not contain security elements (only condition is to have 6 characters, it does not necessarily require elements that give it a minimum degree of security).



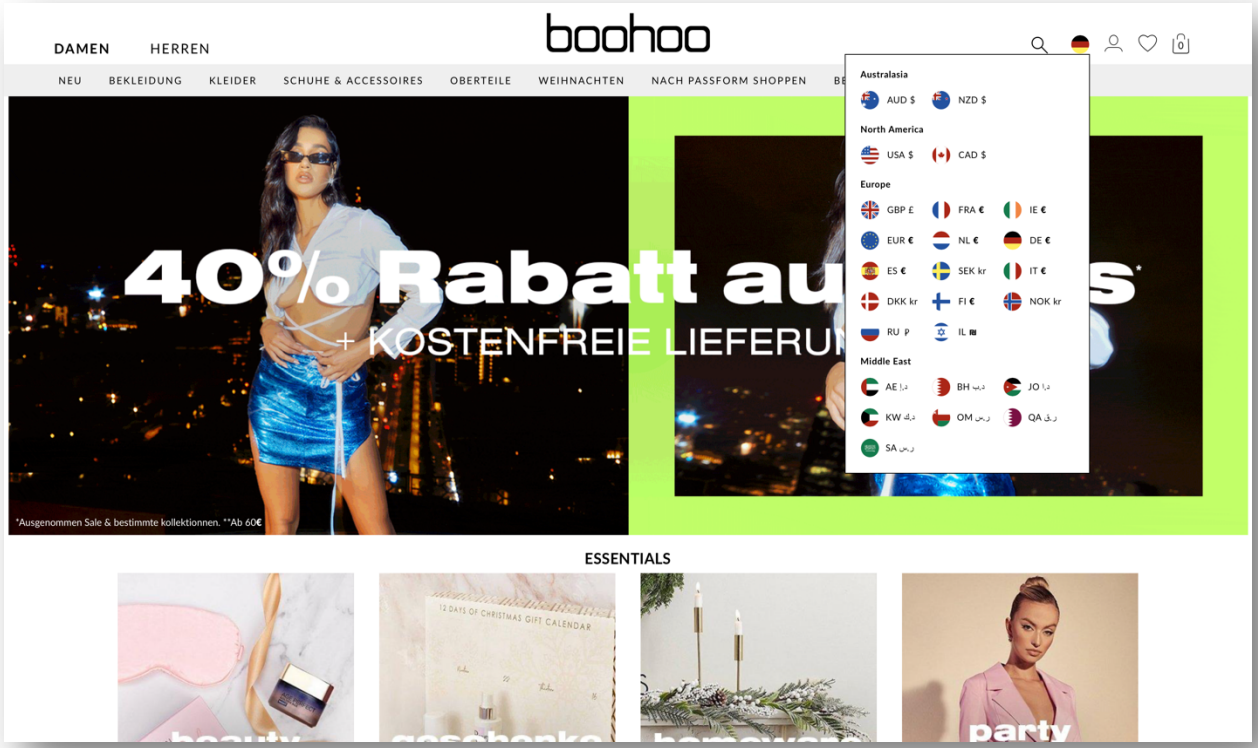
2. The search box disappears only after you refresh the page.



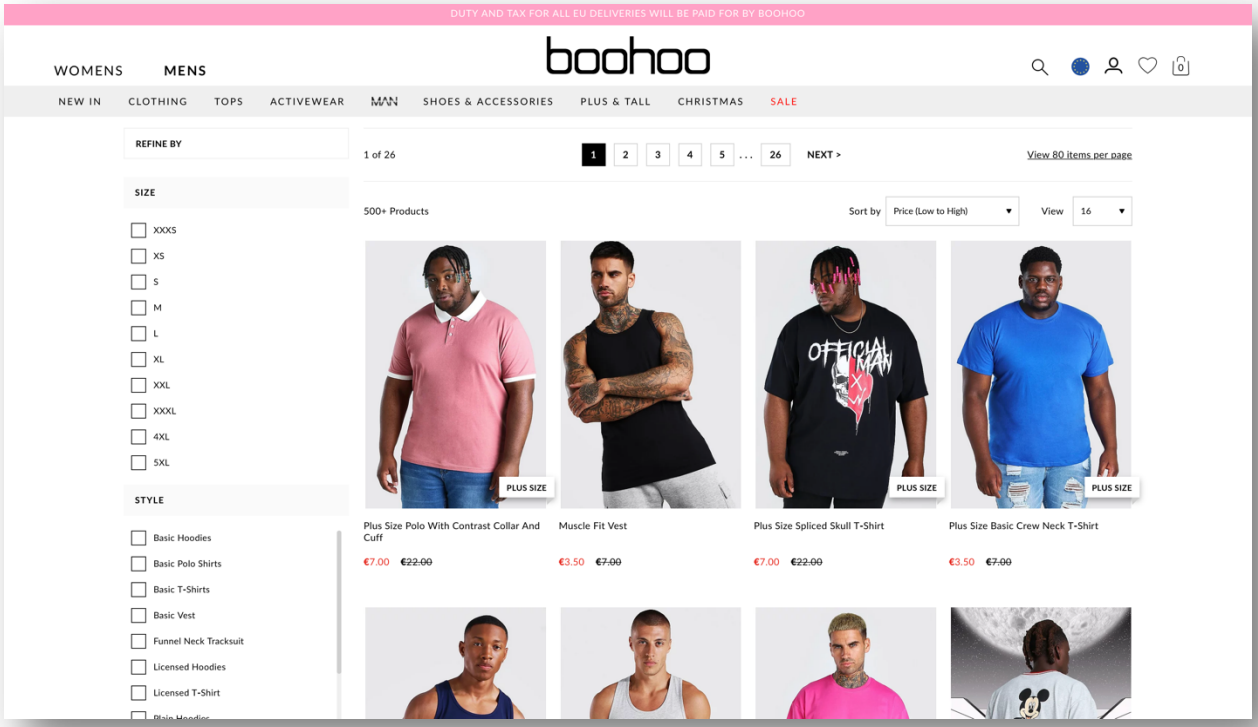
3. We are in the search box, we move the cursor over a certain category in the menu, the search box remains displayed above the menu.



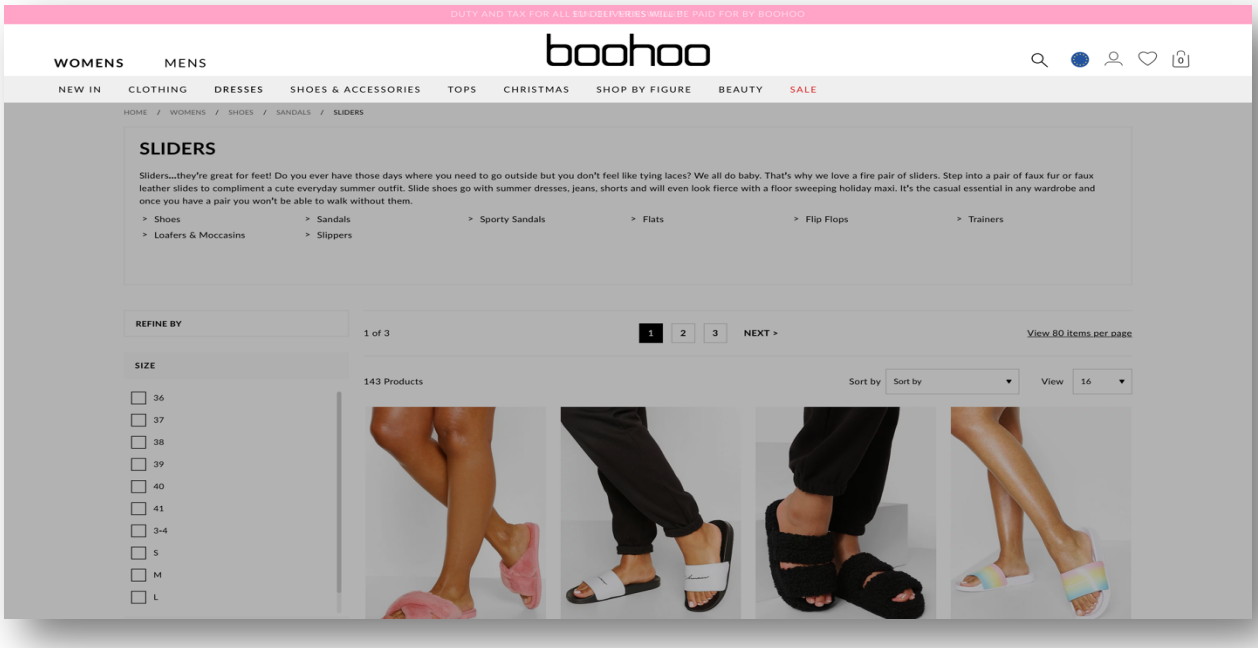
4. The site can only be displayed in the native language of the selected region / country, it does not have the option to select the language separately.



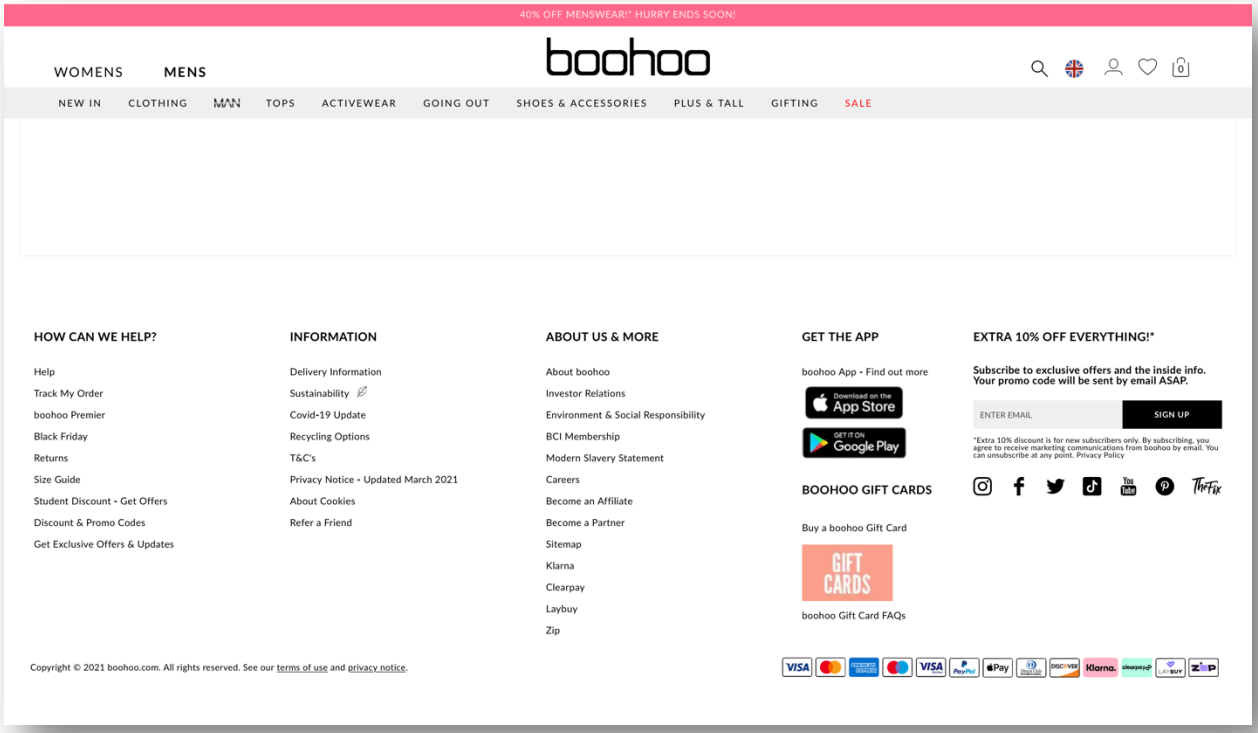
5. The sorting of products according to predefined categories is not followed. We select the display of the products according to the price (ascending), but they are displayed randomly.

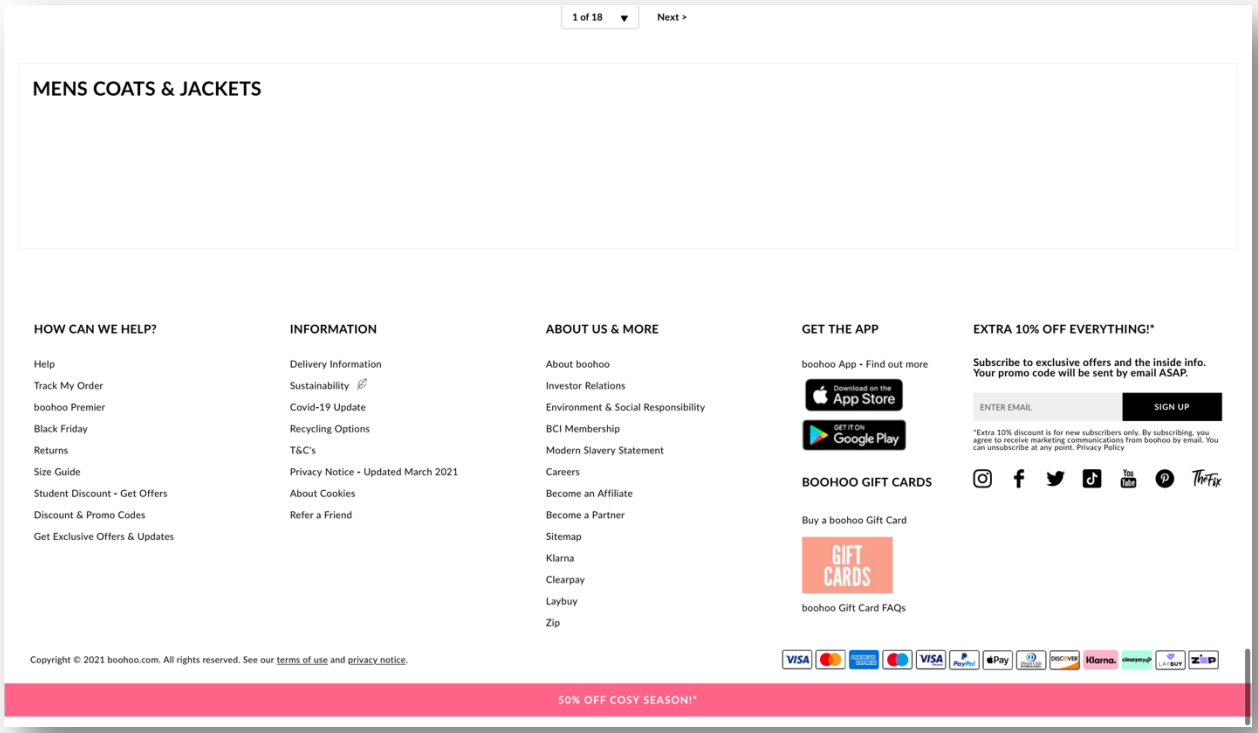


6. Before displaying the categories in the menu, for half a second a gray, semi-transparent background can be seen on the page. It seems like a freeze.



7. We reach the bottom of the page (SS1), when we force the page to go down below the normal limit, the discount banner (SS2) appears for a moment.





8. The site does not have the option of automatic disconnection after a certain number of minutes/ hours of inactivity.

9. The banner announcing the discounts has an active part strictly on the piece that displays the text.

10. We are on https://boohoo.com/mens, we click on the discounts button at the top of the page, the site automatically takes us to the discounts page for women.

11. In some situations, when accessing the site, the user's location is not automatically detected, the USA region page appears by default.
